The Millers were not very keen on Halloween because they thought that it was a silly custom. They said to their children, "You should not go from house to house and disturb people and ring their bells. You should not shout "Trick or Treat!" You should not beg for sweets. You shouldn't play nasty tricks on people. You shouldn't put leaves into their mailboxes. You shouldn't stick chewing gum onto their bells. You shouldn't throw stones into their gardens. But you can have a party at home." Ben and Sarah were happy. They wrote invitation cards to their friends and made a shopping list. "You should buy the drinks and nibbles like popcorn, peanuts and crisps," Sarah said to Ben. "And you should get candles, orange napkins, plastic spiders, a pumpkin and so on. It must be a great party!" They also wanted to play party games. When it was dark the friends arrived.
